example of the Westminster model. Chapter 2 used Barbados as an exemplar of majoritarian democracy on the executives-parties dimension only and not as typically majoritarian on the federal-unitary dimension; its location below the United Kingdom and New Zealand but also somewhat farther to the right fits this description well. Switzerland is, as expected, in the bottom left corner but not quite as far down as several other countries, mainly due to its one nonconsensual characteristic—the absence of judicial review. It is still the clearest c however, because it is more than one and tions away from the center on both dime many—which the map suggests could also prototype—is located far down but less that tion left of the center.³ Belgium is the one be in an extreme position, but this is not cause it only became fully federal in 19 have a strong consensual position on t dimension.
